Since 1878, six generations of the Bouisset family have transmitted their unique know-how in the art of earthenware.

Briqueterie Bouisset makes firebricks, special tiles and decorative elements such as balusters, roof friezes, gable tiles, finials, vases, jars, etc.

The clay used come from their own quarry, so the brick works have total mastery of all production phases: extraction, preparation, extrusion, casting, pressing, drying, enamelling and baking. Their fame comes from special productions such as contoured turned tiles, cord-marked vases and jars, and identical reproductions.

It has a loyal clientele and has worked on classified monuments such as the Palais des Arts in Marseille, Gare du Sud des Chemins de Provence in Nice, etc.
