Since 1984, INEDIT, an SME with 11 employees based in Rouen and Paris, has designed and produced exclusively handmade jewellery. Its workshops reflect the expertise of traditional French jewellery making. Each piece is unique because it is made by hand by exceptional craftsmen.

Each skill area is represented here: designers, gemmologists, jewellers, setters and polishers.

Drawing on all of these specific skills, INEDIT carries out the entire production process for its collections, enabling it to obtain two of the most prestigious labels in the industry: the "Joellerie de France" label and, more recently, the "Entreprise du Patrimoine Vivant" label, for keeping alive the traditions of French jewellery making and abiding by the Kimberley Process for the supply of its diamonds.

For a stone to be set in one of its jewellery pieces, however small, it must meet the strictest quality standards with regard to size, colour and purity.

To put it simply, INEDIT is not just the story of a passion but, above all, a state of mind.
