The heir of a brickworks established in 1891 near the clay veins in the Albi region, the company manufactures horticultural pottery that is turned by hand, enamelled and fired at a high temperature.

It is one of the last remaining French companies to manufacture containers entirely turned by hand. A family business for several generations of brickmakers, it has taken it to heart to perpetuate its expertise: each piece of pottery is stamped by the potter who has produced it, which gives it a unique character.

In its research workshops, every year it creates 25% truly new designs both in terms of shape and colour, allowing it to follow the trends in exterior and interior decoration.

It exports to Belgium, Canada, Spain, Great Britain, Greece and Switzerland.
